Feeding Communities
Although there are plenty of shops, restaurants and bakeries everywhere you go, not everyone can afford to buy the food they need. To help communities in need, two initiatives have been set up in Hong Kong.
Blue Fridge Project	Food Angel Project
On Woosung Street in Jordan, a small blue fridge stands outside with a sign that reads: "Give what you can give, take what you need to take." Inside the fridge: instant noodles, biscuits, tins of food, and even socks and towels for anyone who may need them. Mr. Khan, the creator of the community fridge, says that "a fridge is part of your home, so even if it's on a street, it's part of a community. People can just open it and leave something or take what they need."	 Food Angel is a food assistance programme launched in 2011 with the mission of "Waste Not, Hunger Not, With Love". The programme collects leftover food from different sectors of the food industry that would otherwise be disposed of as waste. Following strict safety protocols, the food items are turned into nutritious meals and food packs in their central kitchens. The food is then distributed to serve communities in need in Hong Kong.

You are members of the Social Service Club. You are meeting to discuss how to help communities in need. You may want to talk about:

- why it is important for young people to help communities in need
- which of the two projects above would be best to organise in your school
- what else your school can do to help communities in need
- anything else you think is important

PART B Individual Response

1. Have you done any community service?
2. What kinds of food are good to donate?
3. Is a lot of food wasted in Hong Kong?
4. Why do businesses want to donate their leftover food?
5. Do you think the Blue Fridge project would work where you live?
6. Would you leave food in the Blue Fridge?
7. Should more be done to raise awareness for communities in need?
8. What should you consider before volunteering?
